On various laws about the city, particularly on Currier park, a most troublesome weed is threatening the growth of the grass. On request the state experiment station at Burlington has given a description of the weed, which is called crab-grass. The grass has strong, wiry roots and seeds under the closest cropping of a lawn-mower. The experiment station advises white clover as the best means for fighting the crab-grass, first taking and pulling out as much of the weed as practicable either in the late autumn or the early spring. To encourage the white clover seeds or other fertilizer should be spread. The station officers write that unless the crab-grass is destroyed at once the lawn will be thoroughly infested with it next summer.

Sporting Life has this to say of two former Intensity base ball pitchers. "Coombs' great pitching, fast fielding and clean-cut victory in the great 24-bus game of last Saturday have made him calling and election as a first-class major league pitcher secure. Whatever betide hereafter nothing can rob him of the glory of having pitched and won the greatest game in base ball history. Anxious to this it is rather singular that the record games of the two major leagues should have fallen to young pitchers in their first season, viz., the American league and major leagues' record to Coombs and the National League record to Reulbach. Coombs' ability is not confined to his pitching. He is a great hitter and a good base runner and should be prominent in the game long after his pitching days are over."
